Remarks of the Supervisor:

Naveen has built a working film pre-production system that reads a screenplay, extracts its production entities, predicts the number of shoot days and builds a scene-linked budget. The work is technically sound and the final evaluation is rigorous and honest.

Since the mid-semester review he doubled the benchmark to 200 films, raised extraction recall from 75% to 91% at 100% precision on 78 labelled entities, and tested the shoot-day model on 40 unseen films (8.19 days error against a 12.81-day baseline). He also measured cost error against reported budgets and calibrated the rate card, lowering it to 48.1% against a 51.1% baseline.

The report states its limitations plainly: cost error remains well above the 20% target, the benchmark entity counts are estimated rather than extracted, and the model does not transfer to an unseen budget tier. Every result can be reproduced from the repository with tests. I recommend the work for an Excellent grade.
